33 History

The cabin of Abraham Owl, a Cherokee Indian, is said to have been constructed as early as the 1790s (more likely early 1800s). Owl's cabin was situated on 202 1/2 acres of land acquired by Ephriam Pray following the 1828 Land Lottery. According to local accounts, Pray allowed Owl to stay on the land. Pray, Owl, and Pray's slaves moved the cabin to its present site following his arrival in 1829. Owl and Pray lived together until Owl's death in 1834. Owl is buried in an Indian cemetery on Nic-a-Jack Hill, which is now part of Sweetwater State Park. Owl died 4 years before the forced removal of the Cherokee from Georgia (Trail of Tears).
